PREFACE.

SAMUEL P. AVERY would respectfully inform his friends and the patrons of Art generally that he has concluded to close the season with an Auction Sale of his entire collection of Oil Paintings.

This does not mean only those works which have been offered and remain unsold, but the greater part will consist of pictures which have not been previously exposed for sale, comprising many painted for me or selected especially for this purpose by the most popular American Artists, as well as entirely new invoices of Foreign Works, some of which were painted to my order, and all selected for me.

This collection is not the largest or the most valuable ever exhibited in this city, but will embrace about eighty excellent subjects by some of the most esteemed painters of our Home and Foreign Schools; and which, if they are not all the best or most important productions of their respective masters, do in some measure well represent their peculiar styles. Included among them are eighteen works painted for a Collector of Brooklyn, which if not among the last of the artists' doings, some may rank among their best, and several have received recent retouching by them. These have just been purchased by me, and I may remark that the entire collection is bonâ fide my property.

They will be presented in perfect order, nearly all in new and elegant styles of frames, and will be sold in that good faith which has in my former sales won the confidence of the public. To their generous support, to the popularity of the various artists, the well-chosen subjects, appropriate sizes, and economy in purchasing, I must rely to save me from that loss which an unserved sale is apt to entail.

57. HENRY (E. L.), N. A. of New York.

The Old Dutch Church.

✓ Corner-stone laid July 2, 1767, by Isaac Roosevelt. Dedicated May 25, 1769, by Rev. Archibald Laidlie, of Flushing, a Scotchman. Rev. John H. Livingston became the first regular pastor in 1770. During the Revolution the British troops used it as a hospital and storehouse. Part of the pews were torn out and used for fuel, a floor was laid from one gallery to another, and eight hundred prisoners incarcerated within its walls; the pulpit was transferred to an English country church as a spoil of war. In 1784 the church was again opened for divine service; and fifty years ago the present seats were substituted for the original high-backed pews; a modern pulpit was also added. The interior decorations remain as originally designed. The coat of arms upon a shield, now hanging on the west wall of the interior, is that of John Harpending, a shoemaker, and one of the elders, who last century bequeathed a large plot of land to the church corporation. The two small cannons on each corner of the church enclosure in William street were fired by the Dutch when the British fleet attacked the city before its capture. The church was partly destroyed by fire in October, 1869, and is now being entirely removed.

500 "THE HUGUENOT FUGITIVE."—This admirable work by an American artist, now sojourning in London, has won high praise from connoisseurs, but none which will be more highly prized by the painter than this appreciative mention sent to us by Mrs. Elizabeth Stoddard, the poet and novelist:—

Mr. George Boughton has recently sent home the most expressive picture he has painted, the "Huguenot Fugitive." So simple, touching, and heroic a story is not often told on canvas. If one ever has tears to shed outside of one's own troubles, this picture of Mr. Boughton's will call them forth. The story is this: A young man of the Huguenot faith has escaped the horrid night of the massacre of St. Bartholomews. He has succeeded in reaching the seashore, but the shore will prove the shore of death to him; no ship or boat heave in sight to take him off, and his pursuers appear—they are beyond the rock where he has made his stand to fight till he is overpowered. He hears the creeping approach of the assassins, draws his sword, turning back his sleeve ruffle with a look in his beautiful, boyish face, sweet and resolute enough to disarm any of the attacking fiends. If one could cry out in time, the cry would be, “Oh! Mr. Boughton, let him be saved!” The composition, tone, and harmony of the picture are excellent.
